Part II: Research, Teaching, and Clinical Contributions

A. Narrative report of Research, Teaching, and Clinical Contributions

In the research arena, the fundamental question I have tried to answer is how best to approach the medical care of older individuals. This has a strong ethical dimension, and I have explored ethical issues near the end of life in a series of papers on advance care planning, developing novel approaches including a goal-base system and video decision-aids. To develop a deeper understanding of issues in the last phase of life, I use an interdisciplinary approach, drawing on history, sociology, and economics as well as ethics and clinical medicine. Recent work of this type has examined the forces affecting the introduction and dissemination of medical technology. Over the past few years, I have extended my approach to include a policy dimension with a series of articles on the use of technology, including drugs, in the elderly. Because issues near the end of life are important to all of society, I have also published 4 books for a general audience, most recently The Denial of Aging: Perpetual Youth, Eternal Life, and Other Dangerous Fantasies, which received broad critical acclaim. I have lectured widely, serving as an invited speaker at a variety of local, national, and international conferences and symposia on end of life care and have worked with fellows, medical students, and junior faculty members who are pursuing research projects, either as their principal mentor or in a consultative capacity.

In the teaching arena, I have taught extensively in medical ethics, geriatrics, and palliative medicine. I have served as an invited speaker at a variety of local, national, and international conferences and symposia on end of life care. My focus is on ethical issues near the end of life

Medical Ethics: As Director of Ethics Education for the Center for Bioethics at the Brigham and Women's Hospital, I developed teaching materials and didactic sessions for the ethics committee as well as for residents in psychiatry, neurology, medicine, and surgery.

Geriatrics: As Director of the Harvard-wide geriatrics fellowship program and as Physician-in-Chief at Hebrew Rehabilitation Center, I developed new educational programs for geriatrics fellows, including new clinical rotations and new didactic opportunities. I also developed new educational programs for the members of the Department of Medicine at HRC and other staff members (eg a long term care grand rounds series open to the entire community) and prepared a syllabus addressing ethical and other issues for post-doctoral trainees at the HRC Research and Training Institute.

Palliative Care: In my current role at Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates and the Department of Population Medicine, I am involved in teaching both palliative care and geriatrics to primary care residents in the HVMA/BWH internal medicine residency program.

In the clinical domain, I have cared for both frail elderly patients and patients near the end of life, focusing in both instances on advance care planning and palliative medicine in concert with conventional medical care. As part of my administrative responsibilities as Physician-in-Chief at the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center, I oversaw the quality of care at HRC and designed and implemented several practice guidelines (including management of diabetes in the long term care setting and management of chronic pain in long term care). My current responsibilities involve providing palliative care consultations to Harvard Vanguard patients facing serious, complex illnesses, both at the Brigham and Women's Hospital and in the home, where I lead the interdisciplinary outpatient palliative care team.

3. Description of Teaching Award(s) Received

2009 Paul Solomon Peer Recognition Award
Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates

E. Report of Clinical Activities

1982-1987 Medicine, Geriatrics Bunker Hill Health Center
Clinical Activity Description: Primary care physician to panel of lower income patients, with inpatient rounding responsibilities
Patient Load: 35/week; Included complex geriatric patients
Clinical Contributions: Developed Geriatrics Team to care for frail older patients

1987-1992 Medicine, Geriatrics Mount Auburn Hospital
Clinical Activity Description: Served as primary care physician for small panel (200) of complex geriatric patients; provided inpatient geriatric consultation; cared for patients as part of physician home care program; cared for patients in area nursing homes
Patient Load: 15/week; Functionally disabled and/or patients with multiple comorbidities
Clinical Contributions: Developed Mt. Auburn House Calls Program, caring for homebound elders and serving as a major teaching site for internal medicine residents

1992-2003 Medicine, Geriatrics Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for the Aged Clinical Activity Description: Provided primary care to panel of 80 complex, frail elders living in a long-term care facility.
Patient Load: 30/week; Multiple co-morbidities, frail, often dying
Clinical Contributions: Developed system of advance care planning for use in the long term care setting Designed and implemented several practice guidelines (management of diabetes, management of chronic pain in long term care) Designed and implemented quality improvement projects (prevention of dehydration in long term care)
Other Relevant Information: –Work on advance care planning led to invitations to speak at a variety of national meetings (eg American Medical Directors Association annual meeting as keynote speaker; Vermont Ethics Consortium; West Virginia Ethics Program)

2003- Medicine, Palliative Medicine Harvard Vanguard Medical Associates
Clinical Activity Description: Provide inpatient palliative care consultation to HVMA patients admitted to the Brigham and Women's Hospital; provide outpatient palliative care consultation to homebound or seriously ill patients
Patient Load: 10/week; Seriously ill, often dying patients
Clinical Contributions: Developing new approach to home-based and inpatient palliative care consultation that can be used by large, multispecialty group practices
